About the author

Olga lives in Prague, an old and beautiful European city, full of cultural riches. Her first book was published in the Czech Republic in 1998, only nine years after the fall of communism there. She has worked for Czech TV for 35 years as a translator and dubbing director and taught dubbing at the Academy of Art. She has translated plays and novels. Her work includes her "Collected poems 1958-98", an autobiographical novel trilogy and a true story about cancer, "Secondary Profits". Her short stories and essays have appeared in periodicals. She regularly contributes journal essays on philosophical aspects of every-day life. An illustrated book of her recent visit to Burma will appear in 2009. Olga Walló is an Honorary Advisor to The Proverse Prize.
